

guarded the house so well that the milkman couldn't enter the yard. Oh, we couldn't think of keeping him, even for Elsa's sake!"

"Laddie did that!" cried the astounded Mr. Graham, incredulously.

He glanced at Laddie, meek as a lamb. Was it possible? Ridiculous! But, actually, the intelligent and scandalous Laddie seemed to wink at him as if to say, "I worked it."

Yes, Laddie, the gentle, had certainly played a part! Mr. Graham happened to explain to Mr. Doane the family necessities.

By this time the latter was convinced that Laddie had foiled him. A small house he owned right next to his own was vacant. Would Mr. Graham move and let both the children enjoy the company of the animal they loved so devotedly?

Never again did artful, two-faced Laddie find it necessary to act the dog villain! He divided his time between his two dotting young mistresses, there were better times for the Grahams and all hands were happy.

TODAY'S TESTED RECIPE

By Caroline Coe

Cabbage and Butter. — Clean a head or two of white cabbage. Boil in salt water and chop fine. Sweeten in butter and flavor with one tablespoonful of butter mixed in the same amount of flour. Add a cupful of water or soup broth and season with salt and pepper. Cook slowly.

FOREHEAD WATCH LATEST FAD OF FASHION

What's the sense of wearing a dainty, bejeweled watch on your forehead when you have to consult a mirror every time you want to know the hour?

The answer, perhaps, is that fashions haven't anything to do with sense anyway.

This odd conceit is the latest feminine fad to be adopted. Earrings to match the watch are also de rigueur.

The little timepiece is pendant on a head band binding the hair.

And when one finds one's attractive self without a mirror it is quite permissible to ask an armchair stranger if he would kindly read the story of the tiny gold hands for the thoughtless possessor of a forehead watch. Few strangers would refuse to perform this charitable service.

READ THIS, THEN SWAT THE FLY

One fly will have more descendants in one season than any man could count in a lifetime, working eight hours a day. Think of this when you see a fly crawl through a screen.

The Chinese think American newspapers the one best bet. Of course! Sunday's issue will wrap 50 bundles of wash.
